MecSoft Announces the Release of New Corporate Blog

Irvine, CA, October 11, 2012: MecSoft Corporation, the developer of industry leading CAM software, announced today the release of a new blog that went live on their website at <http://www.mecsoft.com/blog>.

The blog will feature articles about what's happening in the CAD/CAM industry as well as company and product news. MecSoft aims to attract CAD/CAM industry professionals to the blog for purposes of sharing and disseminating pertinent information using a familiar social media platform.

"We're very excited about the release of our new blog," stated MecSoft's Marketing Coordinator, Tim Strifler. "The blog will enable us keep in front of our current customers, reseller partners, and prospects by providing them with information that is not only interesting, but relevant to them as professionals."

MecSoft has also added a gallery to their blog that features images sent in by customers. The images include screenshots of parts as well as finished products that were manufactured using MecSoft's products. MecSoft has already posted several articles to their blog to kick it off, and is committed to updating the blog regularly with fresh CAD/CAM industry content to keep their visitors coming back.
